Overview:
In this course we will explore the politics of developing nations across the globe. Questions we will discuss include: What accounts for economic development? Why have some countries transitioned to democracy while others remain under authoritarian rule? What is the connection between development and democracy? In addition, we will review a number of political issues within developing countries, including the roles of religion, ethnicity and gender. As the developing world becomes increasingly urbanized, we will also discuss urban politics and the tension between rural and urban development. Throughout the course we will use case studies to illustrate broader political themes. Specifically, we will review the cases of China, India, Rwanda, and Brazil. The readings will reflect the most recent developments in comparative politics of developing nations in order to reinforce the reality and dynamism of the world in which we are currently living.

Required Readings:
The following books are available for purchase at the University bookstore or through online booksellers:

Katherine Boo, Behind the Beautiful Forevers: Life, Death, and Hope in a Mumbai Undercity (Random House 2012).

Articles required for the course will be posted on the course’s Sakai site.

Participation
Your participation grade will be based on your daily involvement in class discussions. Please note that there is not a written attendance policy for this course. However, clearly you cannot participate in class if you are not present. Your participation grade depends on your preparation for the class and the quality of your contribution to discussions. The following provides general guidelines for my expectations for each grade range:

- A’s = speaks often in class, asks thoughtful questions, clearly engaged, always prepared
- B’s = occasionally contributes to class discussion, not clear that the student has done all of the readings, may appear attentive in class
- C’s = only participates in class discussions a few times during the semester, does not appear to be prepared, does not exhibit interest in the material
- D’s = rarely attends class, seems not to be prepared or engaged in the material, does not ask questions or provide comments
- F’s = never attends class

Quizzes:
We will have three quizzes spread throughout the semester. Each of the quizzes will contain several short answer questions to test the students’ understanding of the readings and lectures. The quizzes will not be cumulative, but will focus on the course material leading up to the quiz.

Reading Responses:
Each student will submit four reading responses during the semester. Reading responses should be approximately a page or two in length and contain the following elements: a brief summary, strengths and weaknesses, and questions that arise. These short papers should be submitted through the course dropbox on Sakai. Students should submit their papers by 10pm the night before class. All four submissions must be completed by December 11.

Final Exam
There will be a final exam in this course with both short answer and longer essay questions. Expectations for the exams will be discussed in a review session prior to the test. The final exam will be cumulative.

Policies:

Disabilities: Please advise me as soon as possible of any disability that may affect your performance in this course. I will make all necessary accommodations so that your learning, writing, and testing needs may be appropriately met. You are required by the University to provide documentation of the disability to the Student Life Office, Rutgers Learning Center, or Graduate School Dean.

Academic Integrity: All students of Rutgers-Camden are required to adhere to the University’s Academic Integrity Policy. Violations of the Policy include cheating, fabrication, plagiarism, denying others access to information or material, and facilitating violations of academic integrity. Should you have any questions regarding behavior that may be defined as a violation of the University’s Policy, please do not hesitate to discuss the matter with me.
